Youth Violence Essay

Boom! That was the sound of a gun there was blood everywhere and my cousin’s body was on the floor I remember screaming at him telling him to get up and stop playing, I called the ambulance to rush him to the hospital and I remember all the machines on him trying to bring him back to life. I remember the doctor telling us the devastating news that he was dead. They told us they tried everything but he wouldn’t come back it was too late. That’s when I realized there was violence all around me.

Violence is a ugly word but it has affected my life a lot. My cousin Bizz was my best friend. Bizz was like my other half we did everything together. I remember him coming over my house almost everyday. Now he’s gone there’s no one to talk to about my troubles, and no one to talk about sports. He’s gone all because violence wanted to step in.

The causes of youth violence that cause people to die like he did is gossip/bullying, social medias, jealousy, prove that one is more dominant then the others, poverty, drugs, easily accessible to weapons, negative thinking, and mental illnesses. These are all related reasons to mines why people get killed and why there is so much violence in the world.

I can have youth meetings about positive things to do. This way people will try to help stop youth violence. I can go to more community centers and try to make young people more positive instead of negative. This way people listen to what you have to say. I can avoid the problem, walk away and also be a leader for good not bad then other people will start doing the same.

To recap, violence does affect a lot of people academically, mentally, and physically. I think a lot of teen violence lead to death because gossip/bullying, drugs, jealousy, poverty, and social medias. I do think we can do something about youth violence.
