Violence is something that has affected my life deeply. Violence affects the attitude of my community. It also affects the way my community thinks of others. Violence has made my community not trust one another. In my neighborhood, I don't talk to any of my neighbors because my mother doesn't let me. I talked to one of the girls in my neighborhood, and my mom screamed at me. My mom says that they are unsafe people, without her even knowing them. That really upsets me.

Violence has not only affected my community, but myself as well. Growing up with violence has changed my attitude in solving problems. I honestly think the best way to solve issues is with violence.
Most of the time, when I have an issue, it's always solved with either physical or mental violence. Violence is bad, and I recognize that, but this is the way people understand things in my life.

Stopping and preventing violence is difficult. I'm not exactly sure how to prevent violence, but when I see a fight, I call an adult to stop it. I guess that is stopping it. Preventing it would be not getting into trouble. Not starting nothing, no drama, or fights is another way to prevent it. Violence prevention is very important.
