The causes of youth violence are many things like drugs, fighting, and bullying. When people consume drugs they get high or light headed and they start doing things that are bad and they are going to have a friend that does use drugs and he is going to up to him one day and he going to ask him if he wants to try it and he's going to say cool people only do this and he's going to want to try it and then they start doing drugs everyday and that starts to change their lives in many ways. People who fight think they are big and they start to pick fight for no reason and that not fair because the people that they end up fight are usually smaller than they are and those kind of things make violence.
People who bully other people are hurt or they have nothing to do and it said when the bully picks on someone because they are small and have more things then what the bully has. I think if the bully got the things he wanted he would start to change. But if he didn't he'll take the things from the people. I think that bullying, fighting and drugs is the kind of violence that there is all around the world not just the U.S and those are the things we should change.
The text on the page is not legible.