Do The Write Thing

Violence has affected my life once. It told me not to trust everyone so easily, even the one closest to you. This was when I was young, when my neighbor's wife got raped. This was around one or two in the morning. I woke up to the sudden sound of two men swearing at each other and screaming. I quickly ran to the window to see what was going on. Then I saw my neighbor and his best friend chasing each other with a bat and my neighbor holding a gun. I was startled by this because I have never seen my neighbor like this before. He was so mad at his friend; I could see it on his face. They were chasing each other for a long time until his friend stopped at my neighbor's car and smashed it with his bat. Suddenly my neighbor fired the gun. After that I heard him scream out “don't you ever [beep]ing touch my wife ever again [beep]!” And then he fired again. Then he ran inside to his house.
leaving the body outside on the ground. By now probably everyone is awake. I can probably guess what happened throughout the night because before all this happened I heard loud noises in the houses. I heard the dude was drunk and heard people running up the stairs. I also heard stuff breaking. Then later in a distance I could hear police sirens. I was scared not knowing what to do because he who is my neighbor seems like my uncle because he was so nice to me and every Christmas he would give me presents. Now that he’s in this situation I did not know what to do. Once the police arrived they arrested my neighbor and his friend. The police went from house to house asking if we knew anything about it. They came to my house asking me the same question. I said I saw everything. They asked me to come to the police station the next morning to ask me some questions. So the following morning I arrived at the police station and told them everything and said that my neighbor only fired the gun to protect someone he loved. Next thing you know you see my neighbor come home! But sadly he’s moving to another state. So now you know not to believe everyone, even the one that you call best friend.
