The cause of youth violence in my community and in my daily life has changed by seeing people fighting, and I plan to tell an adult to stop.

I say the cause of youth violence is abuse like their parents are hitting them only because they feel like it. Gangs are part of youth violence, because they gang up on you, and you will not feel safe anymore. Stress is a cause of youth violence because they have a bad neighborhood, or a poor family environment. You can start bullying or hurting yourself from watching shows or movies.

I plan to make changes in my community and in my daily life by telling on the bully to the teachers. I plan to make changes in my community and in my daily life by telling all my friends to tell on a bully if they see one, the only way you will know that it is a bully is if they are pushing you around, threatening, they make fun of them, or beating someone up. Drugs are another cause of youth violence because the users won’t be able to control themselves so anything can happen.

I can tell an adult about the youth violence I have seen. You can just tell the child that is getting bullied to just ignore them or you can tell your parents about it so that they can talk to the bully to stop. I will stand up for the child that is being bullied so they will know that I’m on their team. If the adult doesn’t listen just keep on telling them until they go check the bully.

I think youth violence in my community and in my daily life changed by seeing people putting their hands on each other. My community and in my daily life is going to improve by teaching people not to be scared and stand up for the child that is being bullied. My community and in my daily life is going to reduce the amount of bullying by telling a grown up so that the bully will get in trouble. For example two girls were fighting on my bus and one of them insulted the other girl so she slapped/punched her in her face.
