Stop violence

Do you want to stop violence? Well I do. We all see violence in our everyday life. I experience violence myself. If you are the one making violence that all can change. You should stop making violence because it doesn’t feel good. Remember to treat others the way you want to be treated. Treat people as if they are your best friend. Violence can happen not only in the outside world but also in the web which is cyber bullying. Think before you talk to kids younger than you because it could be a form of bully. Don’t treat people differently because of their appearance.

Violence can be bullying another physically or mentally. Think before you talk to kids younger than you because it could be a form of bully. If your friend is a bully or being bullied talk to someone. Violence has impacted my family a lot. We need to be more careful. In 2009 my little cousin got hit by a car. He was crossing the street; the driver wasn’t looking and hit him. Luckily, he didn’t die, but he had to go to the hospital. He had knee surgery and imagines a 4 year old going through that accident. When some in my family members used to live in a bad neighborhood and they came inside the house and people were shooting outside and hit the door. Last year my brother and my cousin were going to a basketball game and their new I Phone 5 was taken from them because they were forced. If they didn’t give it to the men holding the knife they would have killed them. My little cousin goes to the Edward Everett school and there was a shooting there 2 weeks ago. Teachers had to lock kids in the class room. Now my little cousin is scared. This is not something she needs to experience in her early life or later life.

If a child’s home is frightening, violent, abusive, and neglectful the child will most likely be violent. That is what the child is going to expect outside of their house too. If a child or any youth is feeling depressed or stressed it is likely that they will be more violent or bullies because they try to take that anger on, but some they can’t just keep the anger inside. They have to find a way to let it go out and violence is away they boy let it out. Weapons might be available to them easily so if they have a problem they think its okay to solve it using weapons. They could see something on TV that they think its really cool and then try it out in real life. There is lot of violence in video games like Call of Duty Black Ops 2 or any other shooting games. They make it look like it is fun and cool to make violence. Anywhere kids are they can be influence by other people that are bad role models. They could have experienced a lot of negative peer pressure. Kids can especially be violent if they don’t have good guidance. A lot of kids might be mad because they don’t have both of their parents or because they want attention.

I can do a lot to stop youth violence or better we could do lot. We could make more boys and girls club. We could get more after school programs. We could make better gun laws our gun laws are getting stronger. We could try more to help kids with mental problem so they don’t feel left out. If they feel like they are normal just like the rest of us they won’t want to kill themselves. Other kids won’t make fun of them which will make them not frustrated and angry. We could make our computers and devices more parental controlled so people won’t get away with cyber bullying. We could make high school more stick because the kids their bully the kids that they feel is not popular and that could cause suicidal thoughts or even a death. High school bullies cause most of the deaths of kids being bullied.

I hope you understand that violence is not the answer to anything. Kids if you’re playing video games that are for 17 years old teens you should stop because there is a reason why they put 17 teen or older. That reason is going to benefit you. Stop bullying. If you bully think if you would like to be bullied and stop. Think of someone you love dead or alive and pray that you would stop because someone could really be hurt physically or mentally.
