Violence is weird

In our world today there are several problems. There are diseases and other fatal causes of death. There is also another problem in this world we call home. This problem is what we call violence. The basic definition of violence is a struggle between to different groups. Violence can be physical, verbal, or mentally hurtful. Violence doesn't always affect people, but when it does it can be harmful. Many questions could be asked to anyone about violence. How do you react to violence? Are you affected by violence? If so how?

"Violence is everywhere." This is a very broad term with some truth to it. Wars are started by violence and violence is in wars. This means it takes violence to create peace. Even after peace is made in an area it that does not mean it will not become violent. Since violence can be verbal people are regularly violent. Like when someone is being bullied it would be a perfect example. Especially when they know they cannot be caught. Some video games and television shows can be violent as well. Depending on the person playing, it may cause them to be violent as well. It is hard to tell what can make a person so angry.

What is violence? In the first paragraph I called it a struggle between two groups, but that does not make sense. Politicians struggle and butt heads all the time about laws and a plethora of other things. That's not violence, but it is politics, which is something you should not dispute with others, which could cause violence between two or more groups. For example people dispute politics one may dead or hurt. When you look up violence it says a physical force intended to harm someone. When you think of violence like that it sounds diabolical, but it is not. It is done any shape or form. That is what violence is.

What are some examples in real life? Well, this comes mostly from gang violence which most people do not experience. Then there is violence that causes problems with people’s future. Like make people homeless or in jail for most of their life, but that is an opinion. How can you know violence has affected a person without asking them? You cannot. You can only assume they have been affected or not. Since violence can be verbal so no one can say they have not been aware of violence only they have not been affected. What is violence today?

Violence is a large problem today because no one knows how to stop it and a lot of people are trying to. Sadly, there isn't a solution to this predicament. As long as there is something to provoke someone this problem will not go away. It's like a never-ending contagious disease that no one knows about. If you look at today's world compared to the 1900's there were less serious crimes. This is partly because criminals are thinking more, maybe the news isn’t talking about these crimes, and the police aren't releasing this information about these crimes. It could also be that the penalties for these crimes have gotten more severe.

What is a way to stop youth violence in today’s world. One in certain ways people could set up others for jail for their own benefit. Or peoples methods could ruin someone life guilty or innocent. At first I thought round up a group of witnesses and put then in a interrogation room. Leave them there and have them write down on a piece of paper who did the crime. The problem with that is how can you tell if they are telling the truth. This only shoes how impossible it is to place people in jail. How am I going to find out how to stop violence?

In my whole essay I talked about violence. I said what it is. What started violence. Why we can't stop it. What lowered the amount of violence? Basically violence is too broad to make of it. It is also too complex to stop it. In other words this essay was impossible to really complete for me.
