Do the right thing

Tell your parents, tell a teacher, etc. Brave people usually stand up to bully ing, but some kids are too scared to tell. If they tell, they think the bully is going to go after him instead. I've seen my friend get bullied but he just ignored it. The bully, like me, and the bully stopped. Other than that I didn't see any more bullying.

In conclusion bullying affected my life by making me be nice to my sister. I think youth violence is caused by parent bullying, and that a way to stop bullying is to stand up.

Some options I have about bullying is how did it start. My special way to stop bullying is to ignore the person. I've been bullied 2 times so I know not to do something bad when it happens. Over all I think that bullying is a big problem.
Do the right thing

Bullying is a major problem in the world. Many people have been bullied before. I have also been bullied too. In this essay, I will be answering 3 questions: how bullying affected my life, what I think is the cause of youth violence, and how I or other people can stop youth violence.

Let's get started on the essay. Bullying affected my life by making me not call my sister names. When I was in 4th grade, there was a kid bullying me. He kept on calling me names. In 6th grade, there was also a kid calling names, but I just ignored him. Now I don't call my sister names when she messes up. Now after experiencing the name calling, I don't call my sister names so she can experience that too.

I think that youth violence is mostly caused by parent bullying. For example, a kid's parent bullies him, he might release his anger on little kids. My second big cause of youth violence is jealousy. For example, a kid gets a new phone, and another kid wants it, so he steals to get what he wants. My final thought of youth violence is impression. For example, a kid wants to impress his bully to think he's cool. So he bullies someone else, chain reaction.

Finally, I think the best way to stop bullying is to speak up for someone or yourself. There are lots of ways you could stand up or help someone. For example, call all...
