Violence has affected my life in many ways. I have seen people I love get hurt. Strangers getting hurt. I have been hurt myself. I have been part of violence by fighting. Violence has made me feel sad, bad, and alone. For example, the Sandy Hook Elementary school incident made me feel broken inside. I have seen many different kinds of violence, I've seen and been a part of fights. I see people being abused. I see them on the streets, after school, on tv, and on the computer. There are many types...
The music is stirring and exciting. I feel my body pulse with joy and my heart swell with emotion. The band plays with such passion and intensity, I am moved by their performance. I feel a sense of unity with the crowd, united in our shared experience. As the song reaches its climax, I feel a wave of emotion wash over me. The music is a powerful force, capable of moving us all. It reminds me of the beauty of life and the strength of human spirit.

Some causes of violence are things that you can't control like mental problems, diseases such as schizophrenia. Other things might cause different types of violence like bullying. Some causes of bullying are problems at home of which those kids take their anger out on people who don't have problems at home. Another cause might be because some people are insecure and they try to feel better by making other people feel bad and hurting them.

There are things we can do about youth violence. We have already made bullying illegal. We can stay away from people that are trouble. If we see a fight we can call the police or break it up instead of encouraging it. There are many things we can do to prevent violence.

Violence is a problem we can't fix it completely but we can help improve. We can help the people that need help.
