Do The Write Thing Challenge: Stop The Violence

Everywhere you look all you see is violence. Children, poor innocent little children, are victims of domestic violence. Children are looking forward to a bright future and following their dreams, but people are so angry that all they are about is themselves and put children's life in danger. "Still domestic violence is disturbingly common. In the United States, for example, a survey found that during one day an average of over 16 calls per minute were directed to domestic violence hot lines across the country. Domestic violence is a worldwide epidemic, crossing cultural, economic, and social groups. We were put on this earth to be happy, but due to our imperfections we do wrong things. Some people wonder: will there be better days? What did I do to be treated this way? Does anyone love me? Will there ever be one day with no violence? Violence leads up to broken hearts. Do you ever think about peoples' families, like what you would do to them when you hurt their love ones? People have lives to live and want to do things to be successful and be somebody when they grow up and say "yes I did it" without happen to see all this violence going around. It's time to make a change now! We are tired and we have to make a stand because whoever you hurt or kill that could be someone's son, daughter, mother, father, sister or brother who want have a chance to be somebody because you took their precious life away.
