Youth Violence

Violence is something that goes on everyday, anywhere, at anytime. Many people are scared to use the freedom they have and step foot outside now a day’s. Sometime people say things and do things that cause violence. Some of my experiences about youth violence is people that I see or try to be around me all the time. Majority of the violence starts when another person does something wrong to someone else and they think its okay to get weapons involved.

Violence affects my daily life because violence is just part of life, well not for all people. Another thing is that it affects me and other people because sometimes the people you choose to hang and be around, either bad people who make very poor decisions and choices, or good people who are always the smart and positive ones. Growing up around negative people all the time was bad and all, but football was on my mind so much and I enjoyed doing it so much that nothing could stop me from thinking about it or wanting to play. That’s why I really was not worried about getting into bad things or the streets. When I think about the question “How does violence affect your daily live” I think about all the times when I’m in school and other students when they arguing and stuff and then violent words start’s get involved. Making sure that you are not around people who are going to bring you down is also important.

Then the “What are the causes of violence” question to me is basically saying that the older people on the streets now a day that are going affiliated are encouraging the young male teenagers to do bad things and are making them follow after them. Some older men just don’t care about their lives or themselves, so they act crazy and harm other innocent people for things they don’t have. Nine times out of 10 when you are into violence and all the drama, you have ether dropped out of high school. If you notice it starts with the high school student who finds school not active and feel there’s no need to come. Another thing that people do and think is right is put to put other people down, and threatening them. This is a major problem because after a while people get tired and can’t take it anymore then harm themselves.

Me as an individual something would do to stop youth violence is stand up to bullies and bad people who make poor decisions and are not doing the right thing. Also when you notice someone getting bullied or picked on tell an adult or stop it at that very moment. You stopping something bad from happening is better than you watching or letting something bad happen. Stopping all the gang fighting and killing I another way to stop youth violence. Most children and teenagers now a days feel like they are getting bullied to the point where they can not handle it anymore and feel like no one is doing anything about it, so they are scared, worried, and just want to commit suicide.

Youth violence has many middle school and high school students scared and worried for their lives as we speak right now. Teachers, staff members, and even students are trying their best to stop it and Make the students in our community safe everyday. No one wants to wake up every morning, knowing they have to come to school and be harassed, threatened, or physically touched by another person. So this is why I say that Youth violence happens anywhere, everyday, at anytime, and to everyone.
