Violence

Violence is an action brought by one or more persons where they intentionally subjected to abuse, suffering pressure, manipulation or other action that threatens the physical and psychological integrity and morale of any person or group of people. "Also, the violence is the psychological pressure or abuse of force against a person for the purpose of obtaining the goal is against the will of the victim."

When we believe that only violence is "harming" but we are wrong. Several types of violence are against women's, among them we can mention:

Family Violence (Intrafamiliar)

The most common form of violence against women is violence in the home or family. Research shows that a woman is more likely to be injured, raped or killed by a current or former partner than by anyone else.

Violence in the family is especially because they don't have respect for the members of this, by machismo, by incivility of woman.
Continue and/or impotence of these.

Violence Psychological or Mental

Psychological violence includes verbal abuse, harassment, imprisonment, and deprivation of physical, financial and personal. For some women, the incessant insult and tyranny that constitute emotional abuse may be more painful than physical attacks, because they effectively undermine the security and confidence of the woman herself.

Violence Sexual

Sexual violence can manifest in children and especially in women. Sexual violence is manifested by aggressive acts by using physical force and psychological, lowering self-esteem of a person to a position of inferiority to impose sexual conduct against their will.

One of the consequences of sexual violence against women is getting HIV or other diseases non-malignant which is at risk of becoming pregnant and consequences of this traumatic still children who were a product of rape.