The experience I had with violence was fighting. I was in 4th grade when it all happened, I was fighting with this girl in my old school, she was using bad language and people were saying that we should fight and the girl was using threats because she thought I was weak. So I went up to her and told her to knock it off or I'm telling the teacher, she gave me a dirty look and she pushed me on the ground and scratch me on my face. Then after all that nonsense the teacher came out and had make us tell the story what happened, the girl was suspended and I felt much safer and better. This violent made me angry and a little sad but I was being mature about it, This is the experience I had with violence.

This experience happened because she didn't like me I didn't even know her that well and she was a bully she hanged around with the wrong people, some of the reasons this happened because she didn't care about the other person. We can stop violence in our community is by never let people you don't know that well of first met your address, they have to put more police men/women to guard the streets, more crosswalk works, never tell your full name to a person you just meet on Facebook or any other website you interact with people. The most important one is to never be a bystander if you see a man/women getting hurt or screaming for help, even if you not sure if its a prank still go and check on them you could save a life.

My community could have stopped it when it started getting to the threats and using inappropriately language and somebody could have told the teacher or in a adult in the room with us. I could teach young adults that if you hear anything about a fight or somebody going to get hurt don't be afraid to tell, don't mean your a snitch it means that you care about that person and you don't want anything bad to happen to that person and never solve your problems with violence it will just make it even worse then it was before because some people who solve their problems with violence that can end up in jail or worse death.
