One morning Jacob was walking to school with his arms full of books. One book dropped. He knelt down to pick it up. His glasses felt at the same time he picked them up and stood. There was Gabriel with his arms crossed and a mean look on his face. Jacob heart was beating like a car racing jacob he could barely talk. Gabriel started to insult him with words that sound like deafening snarls. Everyday jacob would go home in pain of all the insults he got in school just for being the smart one in class. His room was fill with tears. The next morning jacob didn’t want to go to school because he was afraid of Gabriel the kid who bullied him. His mom made him go. When it was time to go home Jacob couldn’t get the struggle of Gabriel bullying him he decide to kill himself after all he’s mom stopped him from doing the big mistake.

VISIT US ONLINE:
The National Campaign to Stop Violence has created a program called “Staying Connected.” This program allows us to keep in touch with “Do the Write Thing” participants, parents, teachers and volunteers through email announcements. Please register for this program at www.dlwt.org. If you have problems registering online, please call 1-800-256-0235.