The setting of this real life story took place in the year of fall 2011 in the cafeteria at lunch. The café floor is dirty tooth white, and the tables are lunch bag brown. The smell in the air is nasty like athlete's feet.

The theme of the story is, if you react in a bad way with others, then one day you'll get the same feeling in return. For example, preventing a fight is like trying to teach a hatchling how to fly.

Also nothing good can come from bullying others because one day someone will stand up to you.
