Teen Violence

Teen violence occurs every time you get involved in something. Some people believe violence is physically hurting someone. Honestly, it can also do with bullying. For example, when I was younger I used to get bullied. I have no idea why but they did. I have had some crazy thoughts but I realized I would just hurt the ones that love me even more. "When all else is lost, the future still remains."

How has violence affected my life? Well for once, I choose to make the right choices. At night if I got to go somewhere I never go alone. I make sure to always go with an adult. I try not to hang out with the bad influences. For example, gang members and friends who get into serious trouble.

What are the causes of youth violence? For a start, hanging out with The wrong people. Bad influences can lead you to bad things. They won't help you become successful. I have learned that the hard way. Getting involved with gangs is another cause. Once you get in, there might not be no turning back. It's really important to make wise choices before your actions.

What can I do about youth violence? I can help stop the bullying. If I see anyone bullying anybody, I will stand up for them. Bullying can lead to different things. It can lead to people hurting themselves and even taking away their lives. You should never make fun of someone or call them any names, because you should realize that they have feelings. At the moment it may not seem like they care but they really do. If you call someone fat for example, they will spend the rest of their life trying to starve them self. One simple word can lead to loads of actions.

Teen violence is not just physically hurting somebody. You can hurt them emotionally as well. You want to not be involved in the violence. You should choose to make the right choices then. You can be a good girl/boy and get honor rolls, good grades but one little, small mistake and your life can be hanging by a thread. Hanging out with the wrong people can get you killed. Bad influences bring bad people to you. If you see bullying you should stand up for them. Just imagine being in their shoes. Some solutions you can do to prevent teen violence is ignore the person who is bullying you. If they are doing it constantly then you should get some help. Another solution is to not get involved in gangs and step away from the wrong influences. Those things will make sure you are safe. Just always remember to stop, walk and talk.
