Let Go, Move On

What it violence? Bullying? Fighting? Most importantly, where does violence start? It all comes down to disrespect. Let’s say you hurt someone’s feelings; well they are going to try to do the same to you and so on, until it becomes an endless circle of revenge and arguments. The amount of disrespect in my neighborhood it infuriating! One of my best friends, her car was vandalized, they broke windows, even damaged the paint. That is the fourth time this year. Why do they do this to her?

Long ago my best friend ‘Amy’ criticized this boy for being homosexual, she taunted and teased him, made his life miserable, and now it’s a whole different story. He’s the one mocking her. Some people say she deserves it but he is just as worse, they are both being violent to each other. I know she said some pretty harsh things in the past, but damaging her car is not going to fix anything. But they keep doing it only to her car, and her family. I mean some people do it for a laugh but the laugh isn’t as funny anymore, now it may be her car but next time it can be something worse.

With all this drama going on I learned to fit in pretty quickly, I didn’t have much of a choice back then. But I do now. Violence has affected my life because I don’t feel safe near my neighborhood, I’m scared that one day they might go after someone like me. But at the same time it lets me know who is safe to hang out with. Well once they damaged Amy’s car. She goes and starts to settle the score, thinking that if they are finally even they would stop. Well the truth is they won’t stop. They will never stop until you are mature enough to end it. I beg her to leave them alone, to ignore them. That is the best way I know to stop trouble. Ignoring them and telling a responsible adult is the only solution to stop violence.
But she doesn’t listen and it only makes it much worse for her, she’s getting into a deeper situation.

Many people love to stir up trouble. They judge you and sometimes it’s for no reason, but in this case I think that the boy believed he had every right to do those things. He didn’t, he is holding a grudge on what Amy did, but that’s the past. My schools motto it let go, move on. That’s exactly what they need to do. You should let go and move on because people can change over time. They grow and they realize their mistakes, don’t live in the past being hurt by others. Focus on the future and you’ll go far to achieve your goals.
But she doesn't listen and it only makes it much worse for her. She is into a deeper situation.

Many people love to sit up and talk. They judge you any sometimes if it's the not YOUR part in the case I think after you've balanced it and every right to do.

It's nothing. It's nothing. It's nothing. I get you. We're exactly where you need to be.

You shouldn't go any more so because people can change over time. They grow and they realize their mistakes. Don't live in the past. Pint your efforts on the future and you'll get to achieve your goals.
